Headline:
Cold and bright with some wintry showers.

Today:
A sunny, frosty start to the day then clouds bubbling up. Scattered wintry showers in the north with a few showers breaking out further south in the afternoon. Rather cold.

Tonight:
Wintry showers mostly dying out this evening and becoming confined to the far northeast. Elsewhere dry and clear with a widespread sharp frost, locally severe.

Monday:
Mostly dry with some good spells of sunshine, perhaps the odd shower in the far southwest. Early wintry showers in the Northern Isles.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Some showery rain possible across the south and west on Tuesday, otherwise a dry few days. Overnight frost.
